OUR NEW ADVENTURE! WHY WE MADE A NEWSLETTER?

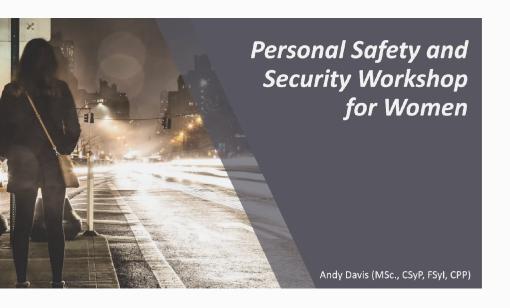

A Message from the Team

As we always say, no two venues are the same and neither are days here at Trident Manor. Each month we embark on new adventures, deliver customised services, accomplish tasks and sometimes, normally due to time constraints or workload, we are left with limited opportunities to inform colleagues of our work & achievements. For this reason, a decision was taken that a monthly newsletter was the right way to remain connected with our clients, friends & followers and to provide regular updates about the company's activities.

The newsletter will discuss events & activities undertaken by the team over the previous month, & will also discuss some key issues & topics being faced within the sectors Trident Manor operates.

We will be sending these out the first Monday of every month & will adapt to feedback from the readers, good & bad.

Thank you & we wish you an enjoyable read.

PERSONAL SAFETY AND SECURITY WORKSHOP - FOR WOMEN

On Friday the 26th of March, our Managing Director Andy Davis & hosted a free event on the subject of 'Personal Safety & Security Workshop' which was specifically aimed at a female audience.

This followed the tragic kidnap & murder of Sarah Everard in London by a serving police officer & the outpouring of concerns expressed by females about their personal safety and security. Andy decided to share his experiences as a specialist personal safety consultant to provide free practical advice that females could use to better protect themselves from violence.

The objectives were:

- Raise awareness of the problems and how attacks can occur
- Help understand Situational Awareness and the part it plays in personal safety.
- Give practical advice to minimise delegates' exposure to violence when away from home.

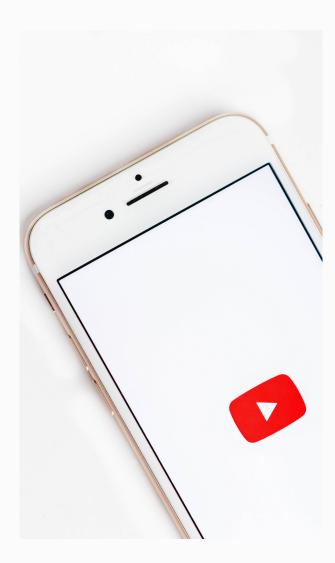

The event lasted 3 hours & was attended by over 200 participants from around the world. The feedback was brilliant & Andy thanks everyone for the positive messages of support. As was outlined at the start if one person was able to avoid violence or becoming a victim after participating then it was a success. As a team, we would like to thank Andy for raising the initiative and delivering what appears to have been a highly successful programme.

prevent violence, I can't change social perceptions, nor can I change governmental policies but I can hopefully stop at least one delegate (preferably more) becoming the victim of violent crime through increased awareness and vigilance."

Online Course Becomes CPD Certified

Coronavirus has caused a lot of changes, especially in the education sector with many programmes moving online. During the first lockdown, Trident Manor decided to expand more into online teaching to ensure people in the UK and around the world could continue to benefit from our training programmes. while keeping the same quality that we have always provided with our in-person training. We are proud to announce that our online Preventing workplace violence & Introduction to the Protection of Cultural Venues have now been CPD Certified.

INTERNATIONAL STUDENT ENGAGEMENT

Valentina Sabucco addresses University of Bologna students in cultural property protection.

On Monday, 8th of March Valentina Sabucco, (Cultural Protection Lead), delivered a presentation on "The 1954 Hague Convention: Planning and applying safeguarding measures" to the students of the course "Museografia Arachaeologica" at Bologna University, Italy.

The University had organised a series of online sessions focusing on the importance, application, and challenges of the Hague Convention and its two protocols in the protection of cultural property. We would like to deeply thank Prof. and Prof.ssa Maino and Dr Massimo Carcione, Head Researcher Maniscalco Center. for invitation to support this important initiative, which we hope will be one of many to come.

Valentina observed that today's youth will be responsible for the safeguarding of our cultural heritage tomorrow.

She identified that it is vital to boost international collaboration, share experience, learn from each other so that best practices can be implemented globally. She shared the experience developed by Trident Manor in the context of safeguarding measures & how they dovetailed into the context of the Convention.

The presentation focused on Article3 of the Hague Convention on the Protection of Cultural Property in the Event of Armed Conflict, and in particular on the concept of "peacetime", "foreseeable effects", and "measures".

By applying the risk management approaches to the Convention, the concepts of threats, risks, and vulnerabilities were discussed, and examples of protective measures were provided. The presentation stressed the need for training across the sectors, in particular armed forces but equally heritage professionals, and the wider community.

"Cultural property protection is a fascinating, varied, and complex field, where you never stop learning and you can benefit from fruitful discussions with peers and colleagues."

- Valentina Sabucco

Everyone plays a role in the creation of a security culture, by helping those involved in the sector understand their roles and responsibilities, the protection of communities' cultural heritage is less a utopia and more a reality.

Valentina concluded by saying, "I hope these sessions will motivate students in getting more involved in the protection of cultural heritage which at times is extremely difficult, but also incredibly rewarding."

Protecting Historical Buildings

Trident Manor Limited has been engaged to provide consultant services to support physical and technical security redesign services & operational reviews at a prestigious theatre, based in the North West of England. This requires considering the fact that the theatre is a Listed building & the ability to install modern security equipment is made more difficult because of the fragile nature of the building's décor & the need to ensure an aesthetically pleasing installation. Trident Manor has specialised in working within cultural & heritage sites for the last 8 year and understands planning requirements & considerations during design & implementation stages.

Supporting Global Logistical Trade Body

In March, Trident Manor was asked by a USA based client to help a global organisation, linked to the United Nations, undertake a review of their road safety activities, identify any vulnerabilities, and identify ways in which deaths and incidents could be reduced.

A detailed review of existing road safety practices was conducted in parallel with an evaluation of the likely threats (e.g. criminal, social, environmental, etc.) that could impact members' operations. Based on the initial assessment, a survey was created and circulated to over 180 member states. The data gathered will then be used to inform the development of pragmatic and sensible actions that the client can implement to minimise its members' exposure to risks and ensure high-quality road safety and security standards are met.

Careers Development Outreach

What does a career in security and risk management entail?

On Thursday, 18th our Managing Director, Andy Davis, was delighted to answer that very question. He was invited to share his personal experiences of working within the security, risk, and crisis management sectors with students on the Master Programme of the Institute of Hazard Risk and Resilience at Durham University

"I believe it is mine and my peers' responsibility to mentor and act as a good example for new generations. If my experience and suggestions can motivate students to pursue a career in the security and risk management, as well as to better understand the options available, that is for me an incredible reward," commented Andy.

"Since 2016, I have spoken with these student groups and found it beneficial outlining the breadth of opportunities that exist within the security and associated sectors. I'm also proud to have helped develop some of the students through the offering of internships and vocational support. I encourage those within the security sector to reach out to higher educational institutions and see what part you can play in developing the young professionals of the future. For those people in education and who want to understand the opportunities that exist, why not reach out to some of the professional security bodies that exist, such as The Security Institute, or ASIS International? Drop us a line, we are a friendly bunch!"

IAASF CONFERENCE 2021- PROTECTING CULTURAL HERITAGE IN A GLOBAL PANDEMIC

Covid-19 has negatively impacted the arts and culture sectors causing operational disruption, financial losses and unfortunately the closure of some venues. This has also affected the ability to maintain and protect collections and venues due to restrictions, the loss of revenue and having to operate with reduced staff and limited opening times.

This has the potential to increase the likelihood of collections, venues and sites being targeted by criminals and other adversarial threats.

this reason, the IAASF (International Arts and Antiquities Security Forum) is hosting a twoday event to share information about the threats to the sector and risk they pose and discuss sensible approaches proactively manage and reduce them. The conference provides delegates, who have responsibilities for the protection, custody and management of arts and antiques, with a professional learning experience assured by the presence and involvement of renowned professionals from across the heritage, risk and security sectors.

Due to the continued crisis COVID caused by and the devastating financial impact upon cultural venues, those staff directly engaged within the arts, antiquities and cultural heritage will have FREE access to the

INTERNATIONAL THREAT ASSESSMENTS

On Friday, 23rd April, Trident Manor was engaged to undertake a threat assessment on behalf of a US-based client following threats having been received by an employee. Threat assessment delivered using local and international resources.

Trident Manor received an urgent request to undertake a threat assessment on a Pakistan based local member of staff following circulation of online materials that accused the staff member of a number of offences against Islam and potentially against the blasphemy laws; still punishable by death.

The UK team set about trawling social media (English and Urdu) to understand where the threats originated and the level of risk that existed. In parallel the victim was interviewed by our MD, Andy Davis who has operated across Pakistan in a security risk management capacity. Due to some people taking offence at the legal activities that were being undertaken by the victim, and the fact that they challenged the more conservative religious views a genuine risk of grave harm was identified. Even though it was established that the most disturbing and malicious allegations had been falsified, showing doctored images and overdubbed recordings.

However, the message was now out and social media did what it does best (for better or worse) and circulated it to millions of people with adverse comments coming from around the world, therefore the risks remained. This was further supported by the discovery of materials from terrorist organisations Terik-i-Taliban (TTP) and Sipah-e-Sahaba calling for action to be taken against the event organisers; the victim being one of them.

Enquiries with local resources provided commentary of the threats and increased likelihood of them being carried out unless the social media recriminations calmed. Preparations were put in place for the victim to be evacuated or taken to a place of safety if that was the decision of the client.

Everything was shared through an emergency strategy meeting with the client, legal, and HR teams alongside a series of solutions and recommendations for keeping the staff member safe and secure.

When these events happen & there is a genuine threat to life it is important that all available resources are made available to firstly correctly assess the threat levels and risks they pose and then secondly provide clients with sufficient detailed information to enable them to make informed decisions. This involves round the clock working but the preservation of life is an overriding priority.

PROVIDING CPD CERTIFIED SITUATIONAL AWARENESS PROGRAMMES TO INTERNATIONAL AUDIENCES

During the final week of April, specialist training was delivered to an international audience on the subject of situational awareness with the aim of maintaining levels of alertness and vigilance from the threats that exist and reducing the risk of loss, harm or damage.

Our Managing Director, delivered Trident Manor Training Academy's CPD certified Situational Awareness programme to an audience primarily consisting of delegates from the USA. The programme was a huge success with loads of interactions and the delivery of specific outcomes that help the delegates proactively identify changes in the environment through the use of sensory stimulus, knowledge, and processed information.

As well as a lot of laughter, there were serious observations about general levels of alertness, how to retain levels of awareness and identifying ways that situational awareness can reduce personal risks, as well as those faced by organisations, the public, and visitors to venues. Throughout the training there was great engagement with questions being asked and clarification being sought.

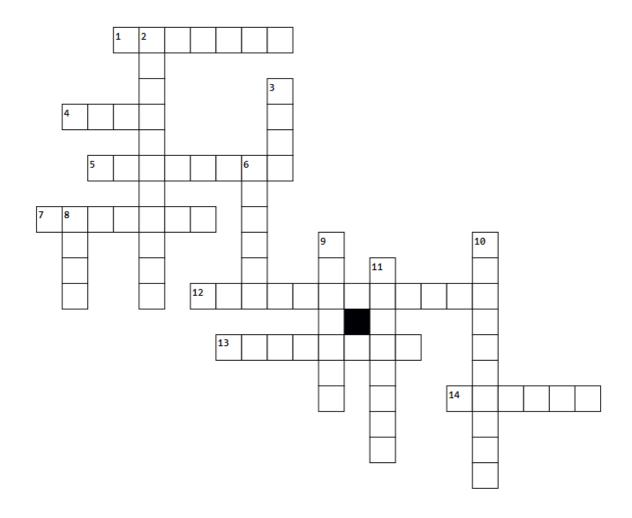

At the end of the programme, all delegates left very happy and having learnt lots because of how the content was shared.

If you travel for any reason, are engaged in any sector where there is public interface, or there are increased risks to personal safety and security, then this programme should be considered by you, and your organisation to help proactively avoid risks that can be faced. The contents of the programme have been delivered to multiple sectors around the world cultural hospitality, including heritage, humanitarian, governmental security, organisations, sporting and event industry, and private individuals. The programme is a great foundation for helping detect surveillance during terrorist and criminal attack planning stages. Andy Davis commented, "Situational awareness is the foundation for personal security. Without it you are potentially a walking victim!"
